O. Swails and Seba A. Barnes Give Statement of Total Cost of Campaign for Judge.

TOTAL OF $305.19 EXPENDED.

Largest Items in the Accounts Were
For Postage, Traveling Expenses
And Hotel Bills.

Oren O. Swails and Seba A. Barnes, democratic candidates for judge of the Jackson-Lawrence circuit, have filed statements of their expenses incurred during the campaign for office. According to the statements, the two candidates expended a total sum of $305.19 in making the race. Under the corrupt practice law, every candidate is required to file a statement of all the money expended during the campaign. The largest amount expended by the two candidates were for traveling expenses and hotel bills according to the statements filed. The campaign for judge evidently means a large amount of correspondence, as the total of $59.00 was expended for postage by the candidates. Mr. Barnes expended $18 and Mr. Swails $41 for stamps alone. Printing and advertising was also another heavy item. For these items alone Mr. Swails spent $56.25 and Mr. Barnes spent $66.34. Traveling expenses for each of the candidates amounted to about $35. About the same amount was spent by each candidate for hotel bills. The law requires that the candidates shall file an exact statement of all the money expended by them and shall include every detail. The statement of Mr. Barnes is quite lengthy and includes items from five cents up to larger amounts such as printing and postage. Mr. Swails has just thirteen items in his statement including stamps, hotel bills and traveling expenses. The statement of Mr. Barnes covers the same items but is itemized into fifty separate accounts.

PLEADED GUILTY
Case For Selling "Near Beer" is Tried at Crothersville.

Prior to the last fair at Crothersville management sold to a man what known as the near beer privilege. The stand was located in the old boarding house. The law defines as intoxicating liquor any beverage containing more than one-half of one per cent. of alcohol per volume. One bottle of the article sold, when analyzed by a chemist, showed two per cent. Another showed four and one half per cent., fully nine times as strong as the law intends near beer should be. In other words the so-called near beer was the real stuff. Neither bottle analyzed had any letting except the name Fehr's. Witnesses went before the grand jury in March and an indictment was returned. The case was set for trial last Monday. The defendant pleaded guilty and was fined $50 and costs. No blame can be attached to the fair management for they sold the near beer privilege believing the law would be complied with.—Crothersville Herald.

DECORATION DAY
All Plans Completed for Memorial Day Exercises Tomorrow.

The members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. have completed arrangements for the Memorial Day exercises tomorrow. The exercises will be held at the Majestic theater. The Memorial Day addresses will be delivered by Judge O. H. Montgomery and Rev. F. M. Huckleberry. Lincoln's Gettysburg Speech will be read by the Rev. T. C. Smith. The members of the Ellsworth Post and Relief Corps will meet at the Post hall at 1 o'clock where a line of march will be formed. Members of Sunday Schools, various orders and the boys' marching club will participate in the parade. After the conclusion of the exercises at the Majestic, the veterans will march to the cemetery where the usual exercises will be held at the graves of the deceased veterans. Practically all of the business houses will be closed at noon and the postoffice will be closed a part of the day. A large number of the merchants are making arrangements to decorate their stores with flags and national colors.

Mrs. O. H. Reinhardt left this afternoon for Kansas City, Mo., where Mr. Reinhardt will meet her and they will make a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Saltmarsh.

FT. RITNER ROAD
CASE HEARD HERE

Improvement of Underground Crossing
Before the Railroad Commissioners Today.

HIGHWAY DAMAGED BY STREAM

Citizens Ask That Change be Made so Road Will be in Good Condition
at All Times of the Year.

The Railroad Commission is in session in Seymour today hearing a case involving the repair of a crossing under the B. & O. S-W. track at Ft. Ritner. Some time ago a tunnel was made beneath the track for a small stream. The tunnel has since been used as a crossing for the principal highway of that part of the county but on account of the stream the road is often undesirable for travel. The citizens filed a petition with the commission some time ago asking that the tunnel be enlarged and that provisions for the creek be made on one side and a highway on the other. In this way the road would be kept dry at all times during the year.

It is understood that the railroad objects to the improvement of the crossing, as it would mean considerable expense and that the tunnel was constructed in the first place only for the stream and it was not intended that it should be used as a crossing for the highway.

The citizens are represented by Attorneys McHenry, Owen and J. T. Brooks of Bedford. The Railroad Company is represented by Charles

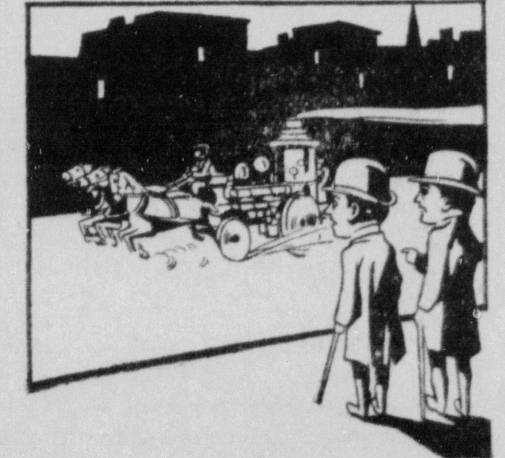

G. Gardiner of Washington and R. M. Palmer of Bedford.

The case was concluded about noon and Judge McClure continued the hearing until June 20 by which time the plans of the road will be submitted to the Commission. Among the witnesses who were examined at the hearing were C. M. Henderson, Harvey Dixon and Thomas C. Foster of Ft. Ritner. William Eggers of the railroad office was present at the hearing.

LARGER PENSIONS
GIVEN BY NEW LAW

Amounts Paid to Veterans Determined by Age and Time of Service Under Late Bill.

MANY APPLICATIONS ARE FILED

Soldiers Unable to Perform Manual Labor Because of Army Duties Entitled to $30 per Month.

A large number of the veterans of the civil war residing in Jackson county are entitled to an increased pension under an act which was recently passed by Congress. By this law the age of the pensioner and the time of service in the army are the principal factors which determine the amount of pension he receives. Many of the veterans have already filed their applications for a larger pension as provided by the bill, and a large number of others will do so within the next few weeks.

In applying for the increased pension the veterans are required to fill out a blank giving the county and state in which they reside and the company and regiment to which they belonged during the war. They must also state if they were honorably discharged from service, and give a complete statement of the services they performed while enlisted. The amount of the pensions allowed under the new law is based entirely upon the age of the veteran and the length of service. The soldiers who have reached the age of sixty-two years and have served for the following length of time will be

STAR WITNESS IS PLACED ON STAND

Philus Culbertson Testifies For The State in the Harris Murder Trial.

DAMAGING TESTIMONY GIVEN.

State Will Endeavor to Show That
He Told a Number of Conflicting Stories.

Rushville, Ind., May 29.—Philus Culbertson, the colored farm laborer who is the state's star witness, went on the stand this morning in the Harris trial. He is the man who was at the Harris home with Paul Harris on the day the farmhouse was burned and while Culbertson was out in the yard hitching up the team to drive Paul away, the son was in the house with the mother. He is accused of killing and burning the body.

It is on Culbertson's story that the state most depends and expects to follow it up with connecting circumstances. The defense realized the value of Culbertson's testimony, and besides giving him a severe questioning on cross-examination, laid the ground to impeach him by ten or twelve witnesses to whom the witness told different stories concerning what happened at the Harris home the morning of March 12, according to the defense's statement.

Some points in Culbertson's testimony were of special danger to the defense. One was as to the time he and Paul left the house where Paul's mother died. The assertion of the witness is that he and Paul drove away some time after 10 o'clock, that he did not see the mother as they left, though he heard Paul call out "good-bye" to her and that he heard the sound of a pistol shot while Paul and his mother were in the house alone.

The defense will offer witnesses to show that Culbertson told them that he and Paul left the Harris home about 9:30 o'clock and it is agreed that Mrs. Harris was still living at that time.

MANY AUTOMOBILES
Pass Through Seymour Today on Their Way to Indianapolis.

A large number of automobiles came through Seymour today on their way to Indianapolis where the big automobile events will be held tomorrow. Quite a number of the machines came from Louisville and New Albany and experienced a hard trip to this city. The road along the Pennsylvania line was almost impassable on account of the mud and water, and most of the machines came around by the way of Salem and Brownstown.

Nearly all of the tourists made stops in this city in order to purchase gasoline and supplies for the rest of the trip to Indianapolis. All the machines were covered with mud and a number of the drivers experienced some difficulty in climbing the steep hills between here and Salem on account of the slippery condition of the roads. Several of the tourists reached here about the noon hour and ate dinner at the local hotels and restaurants.

S.S.S. CURES BLOOD POISON

When the blood becomes infected with the virus of Contagious Blood Poison, the symptoms are soon manifested. The mouth and throat ulcerate, copper-colored spots appear, a red rash breaks out, the hair begins to come out, and usually sores and ulcers show themselves on different parts of the body. At the first sign of the disease S.S.S. should be taken, for the trouble is too powerful and dangerous to trifle with. If allowed to run on the tendency is to work down and attack the bones and nerves, and sometimes it makes a complete physical wreck of the sufferer. The disease can make no such headway if S.S.S. is commenced and used according to directions; its progress can be stopped, the poison removed, and health preserved. S.S.S. goes into the blood and removes the insidious virus, cleanses the circulation and makes a complete and permanent cure by driving out the cause. S.S.S. quickly takes effect on the blood, and gradually the symptoms disappear, the health is improved, the skin cleared of all spots, sores and blemishes, and when S.S.S. has thoroughly purified the circulation no trace of the disease is left. S.S.S., a purely vegetable remedy, cures Contagious Blood Poison because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers, tested and proven for more than forty years. Heart to Heart Talks.

TO THE MAN OF FORTY.

It is the common saying that unless a man has succeeded in life by the time he is forty years of age he never will succeed.

The statement is too broad. It is untrue.

The facts do not sustain it.

A study of the lives of the successful will show that success comes to most men after rather than before forty. Is it financial success? Who, save by speculation, has amassed a fortune before he was forty?

Or politics? Few get more than fairly started in politics before that age. He who goes to the United States senate at fifty is rated as a young member.

Or merchandise or literature or art or the professions?

Most of us at forty are only just ready for successful endeavor. We have made our mistakes and learned of experience. We have discovered our right place in life and our limitations. Years have matured judgment, and the brain stands guard over the passions.

Life and literature team with illustrations of success at forty, fifty, sixty, seventy, even ninety.

Fortunate is he who is in the way of success at the age of forty; fortunate he who, though unsuccessful, has learned his world and himself and has not lost courage.

Courage—that is the prime thing.

No matter what his age, you cannot keep a brave man down. He may stumble and fall and fall again and again. But he will get up.

And some day when he has worked his will concerning himself he will have about him his own charmed circle of accomplishment where "none durst walk but he."

Are you forty—or more?

Hold up your chin and walk on your heels and toes. You are fairly fitted to do what you want to do and become what you want to be. No young man can buy from you your personal experience, whatever he may offer as the price.

At forty you are the son of the God of Things as they are. You have outlived your illusions. You know the ways of your fellows. You know your own ways.

Is it not so?

From the fullness of your experience you are mightily equipped out of defeat to organize victory.

Having overcome yourself, you may overcome the world. For greater is he that ruleth his own spirit than he that ruleth a city. There is in you, battered though you be, the power of conquest.

Courage! You are ready to begin.

Only a Fire Hero.

But the crowd cheered, as, with burned hands, he held up a small round box, "Fellows!" he shouted, "this Bucklen's Arnica Salve I hold, has everything beat for burns." Porto Rico's New Wonder.

From far away Porto Rico came reports of a wonderful new discovery that is believed will vastly benefit the people. Ramon T. Marchan, of Barceloneta, writes "Dr. King's New Discovery is doing splendid work here. It cured me about five times of terrible coughs and colds, also my brother of a severe cold in his chest and more than 20 others, who used it on my advice. We hope this great medicine will yet be sold in every drug store in Porto Rico." For throat and lung troubles it has no equal. A trial will convince you of its merit. 50 cents and $1.00. Myth Concerning the Salamander.

Newts and salamanders are pretty much like frogs and toads, only they have a tail and look like a lizard, and then in some breeds the pair of hind legs are small and in others lacking. Salamanders often get into old rotten logs and if put on the fire run out without being hurt in many cases, because they are more or less damp and may not actually pass through much fire. But folk think a salamander is right at home in the fire.

Flagged Train With Shirt.

Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Alston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," he writes. "My stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 50 cents at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

Thousands of Eyes See "Republican Want Ads."

BIG BRAINS AND SMALL.

It is a curious thing that the public should cling so fondly to the delusion that the amount of physical gray matter a man has in his cranium fixes the degree of his intelligence. General astonishment has been expressed because it has been discovered that Dr. James H. Musser, the distinguished Philadelphia specialist, who died the other day, had a brain far below the normal in weight. The fact is, however, that neither the weight of the brain nor its build have anything to do in fixing the mental attributes of a person. It is true that it is generally believed that a weight of 32 ounces is the lowest at which normal intelligence can be expected; but there are instances on record where idiots have been found possessed of brains weighing as much as 60 ounces and rich in convolutions. The brain of the average man weighs about 48 ounces and that of the average woman about 43 1/2 ounces—the relative weight of the brain to the body being about the same in the two sexes. The brains of tall men are usually heavier than those of short men, but here again the proportion between the weight of the brain and the weight of the body is preserved.

Two things with regard to wireless telegraphy have been brought into renewed prominence by the disaster to the Titanic—the inestimable value of the service as a means of summoning assistance for sinking ships, and the necessity of regulations to prevent private telegraphers from interfering, with irrelevant messages. The sinking of the Titanic occurred between two and three o'clock in the morning, an hour at which it might be supposed amateur wireless operators would all be in bed and asleep, says the Evening Wisconsin. Nevertheless there are complaints that the wireless messages from the Titanic were "taken" with difficulty, because of interference. In Europe as well as in the United States there will be legislation to put down what the London Times calls "these freaks of private vanity or levity or ostentation."

In Paris, the police dogs have now been given official rank and attack on one of them is classed as resistance to lawfully constituted authority. The situation has its element of humor, but as a matter of fact, their protection as regular members of the police, has been found necessary to save them from the lawless gangs whom they help the police in restraining. Still, the spectacle of a man arrested on the charge of resisting a police dog in the discharge of his duty is novel and odd enough to have its ludicrous side.

For a wager a Cincinnati man ate 30 dozen of bananas in 30 days, drank five glasses of beer and several large portions of whisky each night of the test, and finished off with five dozen hard-boiled eggs and two dozen raw oysters. The story is vouched for, yet it is almost as hard to swallow as the wager must have been.

FINDING 'LIVE' ONES

Perpetual Process of Testing, Grading and Classifying the Talents of Men.

HOW SALESMAN WAS FOUND

Quite Often Genius Hangs Out Its Advertisement in an Exploit That Speaks Louder Than Any Verbal Request for Advancement.

"He was working in the stockroom for $11 a week," declared the proprietor of a large jobbing house in telling how he discovered a salesman to whom he now pays $10,000 a year.

"He came to my office one day and said he would like to try his hand at selling to small dealers after hours. The manager of our city department had already declined the proposition, maintaining quite rightly that we weren't looking for that class of orders. But the request was so unique that I overruled the objection and had a line of samples and prices prepared for him.

"He went among the little stores of the foreign districts and of the suburbs, and came back with his hands full of orders, some of them so small that they were hardly worth the trouble of filling. In a month his commissions amounted to more than his regular wages. The next vacancy on the road was given him, and it was not long before he was making $5,000 a year. Now, as I said, he gets double that amount."

The proprietor made one mistake in telling this story. He did not "discover" the salesman. The salesman "discovered" himself. But quite often genuine worth hangs out its advertisement in an exploit that speaks louder than any verbal request for advancement. Here is one instance.

John Doe was a sewing machine agent who made such a poor showing in the small town where he was located that he was ordered to close up the store and deliver all the machines at a neighboring large city. The goods were to be hauled by wagon, and as there were two loads John arranged for one load to be driven by his younger brother, Robert, a stenographer, who spent his unoccupied hours about the store. They started off one morning for their all day drive, John leading the way.

As Robert trailed behind it came to him that it was a sin to haul all those sewing machines past so many prosperous farms where some sewing machines were doubtless needed. So, choosing a moment when John was out of sight around a turn in the road, Robert invaded a promising looking house. He told with enthusiasm and conviction the story he had so often heard John tell in a perfunctory and futile way, and he won, leaving a machine and taking away with him a first installment on the purchase price and a contract.

When, at the close of the day, John arrived at the city office, he explained that Robert was on his way with the rest of the goods, and nobody was worried at the delay. But when next morning came with no Robert and no machines, there was wonderment which changed to anxiety as the day wore on. Late in the afternoon John was standing at the door, looking down the street for his missing brother. When he saw Robert in the distance he shouted the glad news to the manager.

The wagon was loaded with baskets of eggs and vegetables, barrels of apples and crates of bewildered hens, while a bellowing calf was towed at the end of a rope. Robert's pockets bulged with copper and silver coins, a roll of bank notes, and a wad of contracts written on miscellaneous slips of paper.

There was a council of war and a reversal of orders. The two wagons went back next day loaded with sewing machines. This time Robert drove the first wagon and John trailed. The store opened up again with John still there, as assistant to the new manager, Robert, when he told the story, was a district manager.

There is no moral to the story. The lesson it teaches is that as a general proposition there is a perpetual process of testing, classifying, and permanently grading the talents of men, but it is done in the rough and not with mathematical accuracy. It is like grading wheat.

Wane of the Self-Made Man.

The percentage of college graduates listed in "Who's Who in America" climbed from 56 per cent. in the 1903-5 volume to 58 per cent. in the 1910-11 volume.

According to the 1911 statistics, the total number about whom educational facts are given, 71 per cent. are graduates of colleges or schools of college or university grades, 16 per cent. ended their education with secondary schools, that is, high schools, academies, normals or seminaries; 9 per cent. received only a common school education, 2.8 per cent. were privately educated, but most important of all, as a contradiction of the critics, is the fact that only two-tenths of one per cent. of all these men and women were self-taught.—World's Work.

MONGOLS LIVE IN SADDLE

Russia's New Protesges Are Likely to Become Nation of Legless People.

The Mongols, Russia's new proteges and subjects to be, are quite a different race of mankind from the Chinese, Manchus, Russians or Japanese, says the Manchester (England) Guardian.

Every Mongol (even the women, who all ride astride) is a horseman, and so used is he to spending his whole active life on horseback that practically he has lost the use of his legs for walking purposes, and shuffles along only a few yards at a time, encumbered by his heavy skin clothing, on limbs shriveled by disuse and by grasping the horse and crooked from the habit of riding extremely high in very short stirrups.

The Chinese have always applied the graphic terms "horseback states" to the Huns, Turks, Avars and Mongols, who are practically all varieties of one people, and have always extended from the Yalu to the Volga.

They are, and always have been, nomads. Grass and water are their only "property" and absolute need, for they are, tribe for tribe, invariably accompanied on the move after pasture by thousands of horses, cattle, goats, sheep, camels—never pigs.

Thus from ancient times they have always been in a position to send 200,000 to 500,000 horsemen rapidly to any point; mountains and big rivers are the only serious obstacles; at a pinch raw meat enough for ten days' campaign can be "cooked" on the rapid march by placing it between the saddle and the sweating horse. If this vast movable force should be virilized again under Russian supremacy there are those who say that nothing in Asia can resist it.

SOMETHING NEW IN FINANCE

Incident That Proves That the Southern Negro Has a Good Head for Business.

George M. Bailey, whose editorial paragraphs in the Houston Post are known all over the country, believes that the southern negro has a good head for business and finance.

"Rastus," said Bailey, in upholding his claim, "was an old darky who worked two acres of land on a big plantation, and got his foodstuffs from the big commissary which supplied everything to the tenants. Rastus, having poor land as his share, was continually in debt, because he could never raise enough cotton to pay off his bill at the store. There came a season, however, when cotton grew and flourished on Rastus' acres, and when the storekeeper measured up the cotton he told Rastus:

"'You've got nine dollars coming to you.'"

"'Look hyuh, white man!' exclaimed Rastus. 'Go back dar an' look at dem books ag'in. You don' owe me no nine dollars.'"

"The clerk complied, and returned with the statement that he had been mistaken, and that Rastus still owed the store nine dollars.

"'Now you talkin' sense,' said Rastus contentedly. 'Come on back hyuh an' give me a strip ob bacon.'"

"You see," explained Bailey, "that old fellow knew that as long as he kept in debt to the store they would give him credit, and he was afraid that if he ever got out of debt the store might refuse him credit the next time he asked for it. Hence his pleasure because of his financial difficulty."—Popular Magazine.

Masterpiece Gone to Waste.

The very seedy looking young man made his way with difficulty down the corridor on the ninth floor of one of New York's best hotels, says the Popular Magazine, and knocked loudly at his friend's door. Anguish was written on his face and wrinkles on his clothes. He was a walking sign of what it meant to spend a hard night.

"What's the matter?" called out the sleepy friend.

"Matter? It's a tragedy, a death, the end of all things—ruination and grief!"

"Well, what is it?" lazily inquired the drowsy man, without opening the door.

Whereupon the seedy-looking young man, leaning against the door and lifting his voice to a howl, replied:

"I called up my wife on the long-distance telephone last night and told her why I had not returned. I gave her a perfectly good excuse. And now I can't remember what it was!"

Cruelty to Animals.

Brian G. Hughes, whose practical jokes so often delight New York, said at a recent dinner at the Plaza: "I don't mind practical jokes on human beings, but when it comes to animals I draw the line.

"Two artists were once bragging to each other. 'I painted up a lump of pig iron to look like cork,' said the first artist, 'and, by Jove, when I threw it in the East river it floated.'"

"No," said Mr. Hughes, "there was no harm in that. But listen to the second artist. He said, with a cruel, unfeeling laugh: 'I painted a lump of pig iron once to look like a roast of beef, and my dog ate three-quarters of it before he discovered his mistake.'"

Even If It Isn't Leap Year.

"Where is the Isle of Man, pa?" "I'm not sure, my son, but I know that the aisle of woman is the one by which she drags a man up to the altar."

TO SELL SERVICES

Problem Which Average Person Looking for Job Fails Properly to Solve.

ARE WEAK IN AD WRITING

Should Be Modest in Stating Qualifications, but Should Not Hesitate to State Facts—Sometimes Single Word Will Catch the Eye.

Many young persons who are looking for positions have no idea how to write their advertisement in such form as to attract a would-be employer's attention. The writing of advertisements is an art that is dilated upon at length in the announcements of the correspondence schools, but the average person has a hazy idea that such courses are designed for firms having something to sell. The young person just out of a business college does not realize that he is in the market with goods to dispose of—namely: his services. Time may be his only capital and every day that he is roaming about seeking employment is just so much money abstracted from his capital.

The man who wants to sell merchandise writes a description of his wares and puts forth their attractions in such manner as to make prospective buyers desire to own the goods. The youth who is looking for a purchaser for his services says: "Situation wanted by competent stenographer, exp., age 19. Address X 002." He neglects to inform his prospective employer whether his experience has been in law, railroad, or commercial work. Nor does he say whether he is a graduate of a commercial college, grammar, or high school. Possibly he may be a competent bookkeeper and be willing to combine the two classes of work. This might bring him a higher salary and place him in a more independent position in a smaller office rather than to become merely a machine in a larger one, doing but one kind of work. Why could he not add, "No bad habits; prime health; lives with parents?" This list of desirable qualifications would probably bring him many more replies, and therefore chances for business, than a bald statement that he is a stenographer and is 19 years old.

Many a young person wastes money by being stingy. They restrict their advertisement to two lines when they should use four. They think mainly of the initial outlay, rarely realizing that this unwise saving may result in being idle one, or more weeks longer than is necessary. A good, well written advertisement might place them in a desirable position in a few days, whereas one poorly prepared may bring few, if any replies, and those may not be from the class of employers that he wishes to reach. The youth who gives time and thought to the writing of an advertisement and does not skimp his space will have a wider range of choice of positions, with, doubtless, a higher salary.

After a few years' experience the young person in the business world who has tact and discretion, and who takes his work seriously, determined to make the most of his talents and to win a real position in the world of affairs, learns to size up his marketable assets, in the way of business ability, with a fair idea of their real value. He should be modest in stating his qualifications, though in this relation the word does not mean diffidence, but should not hesitate to tell facts. "I can handle a large correspondence without explicit dictation," may be a fact, and it is not boasting to state it. "My letters bring business" is another fact, if the advertiser can prove what he claims. Too extravagant statements defeat their object.

The intelligence of an employee is demonstrated in an advertisement. Sometimes a single word will attract attention and decide one seeking help to reply to the advertisement.

Protected German Workers.

Germany is one of the great civilized countries where the protective experiment of taxing the consumer to enrich the producer, on the theory that as the producer waxes fat he will in turn fatten everybody else, is being carried forward on a large scale. Here follows a detail of the progress of the experiment:

Food prices in Germany are mounting steadily, as the official statistics show. The Frankfurter Zeitung gives point to these statistics by publishing particulars of some railway workmen's budgets for the first half of the present year. One worker, a plate-layer, with a daily wage of 38 5/6, out of which four children had to be kept, found his expenses during the six months £4 11s 5d more than his income. In another case where the daily wage was 5s 1 1/2d the deficit was £7 14s 6d; in another with a daily wage of 5s 8d the deficit was £5 13s 9d. These cases are typical, for two years ago the imperial statistical department published 852 working class budgets, of which 439, or more than one-half, showed a deficit. The high prices, the result of protection, which offers no compensation in the shape of correspondingly high wages, mean that the working classes have to fall in debt with all their tradesmen, and the Frankfurter Zeitung says that this is the cause of the restless changing of residence in the industrial districts, especially in the Westphalian coal area. "It is nothing but a fight from the ballist."

HAD NEVER READ COURT'S DECREE

John D. Indifferent to Recent Dissolution Order.

PROVED AN EVASIVE WITNESS

Examiner in the Waters-Pierce Suit Lost All Patience With Old Oil King, Who Was Able at Every Turn to Balk the Efforts of Counsel to Gain a Little Light on Standard's Method of Distributing Proxies.

New York, May 29.—For two hours John D. Rockefeller was questioned by Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Henry Clay Pierce, in an effort to get testimony to show that Mr. Rockefeller and those with him in the conduct of the Standard Oil company had instituted the campaign for proxies to be voted at the Waters-Pierce Oil company election last February, and that the management of the Standard has not changed the slightest since the court order dissolving the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

At the close of the examination Mr. Untermyer conceded that Mr. Rockefeller gave such testimony as he chose to give and successfully balked all effort to have him answer in the way his questioner desired. At the close Mr. Rockefeller was still fresh, and said: "Don't spare me in the least. I am ready to testify further if you wish it."

Wall street had notification that Mr. Rockefeller was to be examined, and the street in front of 37 Wall street was so jammed with curious persons that the police reserves were called out.

About the only testimony drawn from Mr. Rockefeller in the two hours of questioning was that he signed the proxies for the Waters-Pierce election the same as he signed proxies for all the other companies, because they had been sent to him for signature by persons on whom he relied. He said he had never read the supreme court decree dissolving the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, but was positive that the court decree was being carried out in entire accordance with the directions of the decree.

Mr. Rockefeller was emphatic in some of his answers when the good faith of the Standard in dissolving the trust was brought into question by his examiner, and raised in his chair and pounded on his desk.

The witness in the course of his examination said the proxies were brought to him by his secretary at his house, and he had no knowledge at the time of signing them, of an impending controversy over the election of directors. He usually signed all proxies his secretary brought him. He assumed that the persons in his office knew about a proxy when they submitted it to him for signing them. How much discretion they employed he did not know. He knew he never had been caught signing any that was not to his interest.

"State plainly, if you can, any reason why you signed the proxy without any explanation."

"I signed it in the regular way without feeling that it was up to me to do any calculation," Rockefeller replied.

In reply to further questions Mr. Rockefeller declared that the directors of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey are not the same as they were before. He did not know all the changes, though. He did not know whom he was to vote for; he did not know who specified the men. He could not be expected to give the names in the thirty-four different companies.

Mr. Untermyer lost patience here and exclaimed: "This exceeds all possible bounds. The witness won't answer a question directly. If I asked him if the sun were shining outside he would reply that the moon would be shining directly."

"Do you know," persisted Mr. Untermyer, "what names are to be sent to you on the proxies?"

"No, no, I am not a mind reader."

"Had you discussed with any of them how to cut loose and hold tight at the same time?"

Mr. Rockefeller became visibly angry over this question, and was very emphatic when he replied:

"There has been no discussion about cutting loose and holding tight. I happen to know something about that."

Being pressed to tell what he knew, witness answered, "It is all being arranged one way and that is in accordance with the spirit of the decree of dissolution."

ROOSEVELT CARRIES JERSEY PRIMARIES

Wilson Had No Trouble Holding His Own State.

Trenton, N. J., May 29.—In the state of New Jersey Colonel Roosevelt made almost a clean sweep at the primaries. If President Taft has two out of the twenty-eight delegates to the national convention, he is lucky. Practically complete returns indicate that Roosevelt has captured eleven of the twelve congressional districts and the four delegates-at-large. This means that he has captured twenty-six out of the twenty-eight delegates to the Republican national convention. Roosevelt's representative at Trenton said today that the colonel would have a plurality of about 20,000.

Governor Wilson won a clean-cut victory. His vote compared with that of the opposition was 6 to 1. The vote throughout the state was light, being about 50 per cent of that cast on election day.

The delegates-at-large elected for Roosevelt are: John A. Fort, Everett Colby, Frank B. Jess and Edgar B. Bacon. The delegates-at-large for Governor Wilson are: James E. Martine, John W. Wescott, Nicholas P. Wedin and John Hinchliffe. The vote for La Follette was very small.

IT WAS LIBEL

So Declares the Jury in the Case Against New York Merchant.

Washington, May 29.—It took a jury about five minutes to find Henry W. A. Page, a linen merchant of New York, guilty of a charge of libelling the members of the house judiciary committee.

In a letter Page charged the house judiciary committee were crooks because that body did not take up the impeachment of certain federal officials, who were charged by Page as being grafters.

Majority Favors Return to Work.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 29.—According to returns from the local unions of district No. 11 United Mine Workers of America, of the referendum election held in the Indiana bituminous coal field yesterday, the miners have accepted the new wage contract and the proposition to return to work by a large majority.

Indiana Prohibitionists are holding their state convention at Indianapolis today.

The annual meeting of the Indiana State Federation of Labor will be held in Richmond next September.

By a vote of 80 to 125 the house voted down the amendment appropriating $6,000,000 for two battleships this year.

The District of Columbia primary election gives Champ Clark the district's six delegates to the Baltimore convention.

Cincinnati has started a boom for Congressman Nicholas Longworth for the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio.

The town of Skiatook, Okla., was practically wiped out by a cyclone. Fourteen persons were killed and many more injured.

More than a hundred persons were killed by a fire in a theater at Villareal, Spain, which was caused by the explosion of a cinematograph.

The Texas state Democratic convention instructed the delegates to the national convention to vote as a unit for Woodrow Wilson for president.

Conditions in southern Mexico are growing worse. The Sierra Juarez Indians have arisen against the government in Oaxaca and disturbances in the Tehuantepec region are increasing.

SENATE HEARS FINAL REPORT

Investigation of Titanic Wreck Officially Closed.

AFFAIR NOW UP TO ENGLAND

Senator Smith's Report Remits Those Responsible For Alleged Violations of the Laws to Great Britain For Punishment—Senate Votes to Captain Rostrom of the Carpathia a Gold Medal For Rescue Work.

Washington, May 29.—After Senator Smith of Michigan had submitted the report on behalf of the committee, accompanying it by a speech, the senate received and disposed of the report of the committee that investigated the Titanic wreck. The report recommended the resolution extending the thanks of congress to Captain Rostrom of the Carpathia, and appropriated $1,000 for a gold medal to be presented to him in recognition of the valor of the captain and crew of the Carpathia. The resolution was promptly adopted.

With the passing of the resolution proposed by Senator Smith and the submission of the report, the senate concluded its work on the Titanic affair so far as this session of congress is concerned.

The report remitted those responsible for alleged violations of the laws to Great Britain for punishment, and distributes the blame as follows:

Captain Stanley Lord of liner Californian—for ignoring distress rockets, from "indifference or carelessness," when less than nineteen miles from the Titanic.

Captain Smith of the Titanic—for ignoring repeated ice warnings, without decreasing maximum speed, doubling lookouts, or warning passengers after collision.

Operators of Titanic—for refusing details of accident to the steamer Frankfurt when asked to explain C. Q. D.

Titanic's officers—for failing to notify passengers; neglecting to load lifeboats to capacity, and absence of discipline.

British Board of Trade—for cursory tests and inspection of the new ship; lax life saving regulations; obsolete maritime laws and antiquated rules.

Shipbuilders—for failing to make "watertight" compartments actually watertight.

Operator Cottam of Carpathia—for failing to send J. Bruce Ismay's message from Carpathia to New York until two days after accident.

Operators McBride of Titanic and Cottam of Carpathia—for suppressing news to sell to New York newspapers for "blood money."

Marconi company—for countenancing operators' suppression of news for mercenary motives.

International Mercantile Marine company—for manning Titanic with scant, undrilled, untrained crew.

White Star line—for suppressing news for sixteen hours and then sending misleading messages to friends and relatives of those aboard the Titanic.

Survivors of crew—for failing to "bunch" survivors in half filled boats and return with emptied lifeboats to rescue drowning swimmers.

Generally—for failure to carry sufficient lifeboats, and inefficient use of those available.

THE CUBAN REVOLT

Stage All Set For Uncle Sam to Step in and Do Police Duty.

Washington, May 29.—With the stage all set for the United States to step into Cuba to perform police duty, the situation, so far as Washington is concerned, hangs upon the intentions of the negro revolt leaders in Cuba. Advice from Cuba state that the government troops do not seem to be seeking out the negroes to compel them to disperse, while the negroes are assiduously avoiding encounters with President Gomez's troops.

There is, however, a great deal of pillaging being indulged in by the negroes. Positive information has come to the state department, however, to the effect that, contrary reports notwithstanding, there has been no destruction of valuable property in the disaffected region. Estenoz, the negro leader, has begun the discussion with the Gomez government and it is believed by many that President Gomez will ultimately treat with the rebels. Estenoz is demanding the repeal of the Mourou law, which prohibits the organization of a negro political party. Unless this demand is complied with Estenoz has informed President Gomez the negroes will continue to revolt.

AMBASSADOR'S SPEECH IN VERY BAD TASTE

Washington Talking About Brazilian's Blunder.

Washington, May 29.—The general opinion here is that Ambassador Da Gama of Brazil not only committed a serious breach of good taste but made a distinct blunder as a diplomat in attacking the United States government for the "coffee trust" suit, while speaking at the Pan-American lovefeast in New York Monday night.

The Brazilian ambassador has now made it impossible for the government to withdraw the coffee suit or indeed to make any considerable concessions in deference to the Brazilian government. Similar incidents in diplomatic history in Washington were recalled, many of which resulted in the dismissal of the diplomatic representative who figured in them. Secretary Knox chooses, however, to take no official notice of the Brazilian ambassador's remarks, even though he was himself present when the attack upon the government was made. It has become known that the state department was not consulted about the bringing of suit against the Brazilian coffee syndicate and that it registered its emphatic disapproval of the suit when it became aware of it.

Ambassador Da Gama was aware of this before he went to the Pan-American dinner, yet the ambassador so phrased his remarks as to make it appear that the suit was being aimed directly at Brazil by the department of the government having in charge the foreign relations rather than by the department of justice concerned in bringing prosecutions for violations of the laws of the United States.

COURT UPHOLDS DRY CONTENTION

Old Remonstrance Law Gains a Decisive Victory.

SUPERCEDES THE PROCTOR LAW

Supreme Court Holds That Nothing in the Local Option Statute Shall Interfere in Any Manner With the Will of the People as Expressed Through the Exercise of a Remonstrance Under Operations of the Moore Law.

Indianapolis, May 29.—"Drys" have the right under the law to use any or all the means provided by law to prevent the granting of saloon licenses by a board of county commissioners, so the supreme court has just ruled; also that the adoption of one plan by the "drys" does not prevent them from using any other legal means at their command to accomplish the end. The case came up on appeal from a decision of the Orange circuit court, and will put six saloons in French Lick township out of business.

Shortly after the passage of the Proctor local option law in 1911, some of the residents of French Lick township asked for a local option election. The election resulted in a "wet" victory by a majority of 120. The "drys" became fearful of the prospective result, and the day before the election they filed a remonstrance against the granting of any saloon licenses within the township. The board of county commissioners held the remonstrance good and refused to grant the licenses to any of the eight applicants. The applicants appealed to the circuit court, which held that the "drys" had chosen to ask for a local option election as one of two available methods of determining the saloon question, and that they could not foreclose the question before the election by filing a remonstrance. The circuit court found that the township was entitled to six saloons and it granted that number of licenses. From this decision the "drys" appealed to the supreme court.

The supreme court says that the Proctor law plainly says that that law shall not in any manner interfere with the operation of the Moore remonstrance law. It says the persons opposed to saloons have the right to use any and all of the laws still in force, providing for a curbing of the liquor traffic, and that the use of one does not deprive them of the use of another method.

KILLED HIS WIFE

Then Going to Barn Lot, Stephen Bovinet Killed Himself.

Evansville, Ind., May 29.—Stephen J. Bovinet, aged thirty-seven, a farmer living near Branchville, in Perry county, killed his wife with a hatchet and then went to the barn lot, where he turned an old army musket on himself, discharging it with a stick and dying instantly. The couple had violent quarrels, neighbors say. Bovinet objecting to the manner in which his wife kept the house and prepared his meals. Bovinet had declared to outsiders he would kill either her or himself.

The only witness was a seventeen-year-old daughter of the woman, who, after throwing a shoe last through a window in an attempt to part the combatants on the inside of the house, ran away and hid for fear her stepfather would pursue her.

Permitted to Withdraw Plea.

Logansport, Ind., May 29.—Wallace Thompson, twenty-two years old, pleaded guilty to killing Roy Kimerer, twenty-one years old, his friend, with a brick after a quarrel. He was permitted to withdraw his plea pending a grand jury indictment. The police are seeking two men on murder charges growing out of the death of Judson Dunham, who also was slain in a quarrel.

Farmer's Shocking Death.

Madison, Ind., May 29.—Henry Walker, a farmer, seventy years old, was dragged to death by his team of horses on his farm, ten miles west of here. Walker was using a drag when the horses ran away and he was thrown under the implement and pulled about a twenty-acre field several times.

Masons Will Erect Home.

Indianapolis, May 29.—A resolution was adopted by the Indiana grand lodge of Masons, in session here, for the beginning of immediate arrangements for the building of a Masonic home. The important thing that remains for the grand lodge to do is to select the site for the proposed home.

Enforcing Curfew Law.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 29.—A movement for the strict enforcement of the curfew law has been started by Judge Charles Batt of the city court. He has announced that parents of children who violate the law will be fined.

Cookstove Topped Over on Her. Columbus, Ind., May 29.—Mrs. Daniel Thurston, whose husband is in a critical condition from an operation at the city hospital, was fatally scalded when a cookstove toppled over on her.

FATHER WILLING TO SUFFER FOR HIS SON

But Postoffice Inspectors Pushed Inquiry Further.

Indianapolis, May 29.—Assistant Postmaster Muri Rowe, age twenty-one, at Harrisville, who embezzled the government's money to meet his expenses while he wooed and won the daughter of a wealthy Randolph county farmer, and who was willing to see his father, the postmaster, face prosecution for the crime, was sentenced to federal prison at Leavenworth for two years by Judge Anderson.

The bride of only two months, whose marriage to young Rowe took place only two or three days after the exposure that he and not his father was the embezzler, wept violently in court when it became apparent that her husband was to serve a sentence, and had to be assisted from the courtroom.

The purchase of a horse and buggy, of a diamond ring for the girl, who was then his fiancée, and the expenditure of money by the younger Rowe in attending fairs and in going frequently to Union City and other cities to attend the theater, were the clues that enabled the inspectors to show that Frank M. Rowe, the postmaster at Harrisville, was trying to shield his guilty son when he admitted responsibility for the $588.80 shortage in the little postoffice. The son had stood by, heard his father accused and heard the latter take the criminal responsibility of the shortage without objection, but other children of the postmaster later confided to inspectors that the son had been spending money freely. The inability of the son under inquiry to show any income that would compare with his expenditures was followed by his confession.

Appeal Being Considered.

New York, May 29.—The government lost its first action in its suit to curb the alleged coffee trust when the United States circuit court refused to issue an injunction restraining the alleged trust from disposing of 950,000 bags of coffee stored in a Brooklyn warehouse. An appeal from the New York court decision to the supreme court of the United States is being considered.

THE PRIMARY LAW.

The presidential primary law has been given a fair test during the past few weeks and it appears that there are several features which are not satisfactory under the present conditions. In a number of states the form of the ballots have been somewhat complex, and many of the voters were not able to designate their choice as they feared that the ballots would be invalidated and thrown out in the final count. This matter of course can be remedied, but there are other features which appear to be of a more serious nature.

In the primary the candidates are almost compelled to take the stump in their own behalf, and if the president is seeking renomination, as was the case this year, he is almost forced to go into the fight.

This is a deplorable situation for the president of the United States holding the most honorable and exalted position within the gift of the American people should not be compelled to appear personally in a campaign in which he is seeking office. So long as the primary is conducted under present conditions, however, we can look for the president, who is asking for renomination, to take a part in the campaign, for competing candidates will make charges which must be refuted and the people will naturally expect that the answers be given the personal attention of the man against whom they are directed. The president under such conditions will not go into the campaign because of a choice but by necessity.

One of the ways in which this difficulty can be eliminated is by making the term of the president a longer period than four years and permitting the president to serve but one term. This question has been much discussed in recent years for it is conceded that it takes sometime for the newly elected candidate to become thoroughly familiar with the duties of his office, and that the best work of any administration is done just before the term expires. In fact, several presidents who have held the office for eight years have done their greatest work during the closing years of their second term. This is a question which will likely be given serious consideration as it is another move towards the advancement and progress of our government.

With the victory of Theodore Roosevelt in the New Jersey primary Tuesday, the race between him and President Taft will be closed. The president's lieutenants still declare that he has a majority of the delegates and will be nominated without much difficulty. Workers for Roosevelt announce that they are just as certain that he will receive the nomination and already has enough votes to give him the nomination. It now seems that the fight will be carried to the convention hall and that the balance of power will rest with the un-instructed delegates and the outcome of the contested votes. An interesting and exciting time is promised for the visitors at the Chicago convention next month.

Memorial Day is an excellent time for the public to show their appreciation of the service of the veterans who fought so gallantly in the late civil war and is a day when these brave soldiers should be given the honor they deserve. There is no better way to do this than by decorating the business houses and homes with flags and national colors. Decorations for Memorial Day should be in evidence in the business district and residential part of the city, especially along the route which will be taken in the line of march.

Post Office Holiday.

Tomorrow, May 30, being Memorial Day, the post office will be closed from 10 a. m. until 6 p. m. Both the general delivery and carriers' windows will be open in the evening from 6 o'clock until 7 o'clock. The office will close for the day at 7 o'clock. Carriers will make forenoon delivery and evening collection. Rural carriers will not go out on their routes tomorrow.

CHAPTER IX.

The Chance for Jessica.

When the assistant manager of the Mercury Company came through the train, next morning, and saw the two who were breakfasting together in the dining-car, he stopped in the aisle with an expression of one brought face to face with the disagreeable unexpected.
"Well!" he ejaculated. "Well!"
"Start it with an H, if you like,"
suggested Stanton, coolly amused.

Mr. Green's mouth grew thin from pressure.

"If you quarrel with Floyd, I shall not know where out here I can get you another mechanic in time," he gave stiff warning.

"All right," was the answer.
Floyd was engaged in blocking out a map with toothpicks, and did not look up; he appeared even more ridiculously young and gay-spirited than usual, in the morning sunlight. But something in the pulse of his bright head echoed that "all right." Mr. Green went on, and interfered no more during the journey.

The speed carnival held upon the superb two-mile track was to extend over three days. The contests were of varied types and classes, but the Mercury was entered for at least one event and frequently several, on each day.

"Aren't there any Atlanta cars entered, at all?" Floyd wondered, on the first morning at the track.

"None," Stanton assured.

"Then I won't need to burn a joss stick."

"What for?"

"Luck," said Floyd sweetly; and refused to explain.

Their luck held good. They had neither illness nor serious accident to mar their series of victories and trials.
For Stanton drove as if by inspiration, and many of the honors of the carnival remained with him.

"You've struck the perfect course, Stanton," declared a famous rival, upon offering his congratulations after suffering a masterly defeat in a five-mile contest. He did not like the other man, but he was obliged to admire him.

"How so?" queried Stanton as succinctly.

"Between recklessness and over-caution."

It was quite true. With Floyd beside him, Stanton's driving was as daringly brilliant, but characterized by some rational consideration of the possibilities of disaster. Why? No one had time to speculate.

It was commencing to trouble Stanton himself, this growing affection for his mechanic that threatened to become an absorbing need. He had never needed any one, he had been self-sufficient and self-centered; and now he felt a blank chill at the idea of losing the society of this boy-man.
It chafed and fretted him with a sense of bondage; when he felt the cords draw most, he turned upon Floyd and worried him savagely.

Floyd laughed. And Floyd's laughter would have disarmed a Cossack. When he did not laugh, he flashed back, spark to powder, so that they quarreled on an average four times a day.
And they spent every available moment together, until their friendship became patent even to the skeptical
Mr. Green.

"We can plan out some of our factory affairs on the way home, on the train," Stanton arranged, at the close of the last day, when taking temporary leave of his mechanic at the Mercury camp.

"I'm planning a fender for each side of the Comet racing car, so that when you feel like knocking in a few lengths of the infield fence, as you did this afternoon, we'll be ready for it," mocked Floyd, his effervescent youth head as champagne.

"Fence or no fence, we won," Stanton retorted indulgently.

"Of course! You kept right on driving the front of your car, so the rear just naturally had to climb back on the road and follow. I expected that; you were too busy to stop for a little thing like side-wiping a fence."

"You seemed to expect it," the other corroborated. He looked with interested curiosity at his nonchalant assistant. "If I am too busy to worry at such times, Floyd; you are not.

Don't you ever think of what is likely to happen when we are on the verge of a smash?"

Floyd paused, turning his large clear eyes on the questioner.
"There's just one thing I'm asking," he gravely returned. "That is, that when it comes, it will be a good smash. No one minds just dying—we're sure to do it some day, anyhow
—but to be mugged up and patched together again, no! Now," his irrepressible smile glanced out again, "that's why I feel so safe with you; there is a deadly finality about your driving methods—"

"That is about enough," Stanton signified. "I'll see you on the train, then."

They did meet on the train, and passed long hours of travel in work and discussion. The other passengers came to take a decided, if furtive interest in the two who sat opposite each other in absorbed conversation or argument, making drawings on envelopes and time-tables to illustrate their points and even leaving rows of figures upon the menu cards in the dining-car.

Incidentally, both men displayed a thorough training in mechanical design and construction, Stanton's far the more finished and scientific.

"I did not know—" Floyd marveled,
at last.

Stanton forestalled the question by indifferently explaining.

"I am a mechanical engineer; I graduated from college at twenty-one; that was five years ago. You have dropped your pencil. What do you say to staying over half a day at Buffalo and visiting your factory?"

"Fine," approved Floyd, a trifle slowly. "A half day, not more. We have got to make ready for that Cup race."

"Three weeks off. You're getting as old-womanish as Green."

"Too bad. Still I have to be at the Mercury plant when you don't. Half a day ought to be enough."

Stanton surveyed him, irritated, yet without tangible cause for irritation.
There were times when he could have imagined that Floyd evaded too close companionship with him, subtly held him at arm's length.

They stayed the half day at Buffalo, and went out to the huge, silent group of buildings that had been the Comet factory.

It gave Stanton a strange sensation to watch Floyd's assured familiarity with this place and atmosphere; to see him so naturally draw from his pocket the bunch of keys to admit them and unhesitatingly fit each to its corresponding door or gate. Yet, this was where he belonged—only there should have been busy life instead of this dead emptiness. Their voices ech-ed loud through the desolation, where the massive, motionless machinery stood towering above the visitor and the slight young master of the domain,
the metal-spotted, roughened factory floors reverberated under their footsteps.

As they made the tour from room to room and building to building, Floyd grew slowly whiter, his explanations more brief. When they finally arrived at a glass-set door marked office, he stopped short and laid his hand upon the wall as if to steady himself.

"Go away, for a moment," he requested, his voice catching. "I'll come after you. I haven't been here since my father—"

Stanton swung on his heel and went out; out to look at the mile track, where Edgar Floyd used to practice racing with little Jes tied in the car beside him, and where later the older Jes played mechanic to his father's driving. And standing there under the dull October sky, Stanton thought of many things.

When Floyd came after him, half an hour later, Stanton turned from his position against the track railing.

"Floyd, what do you figure is going to become of your sister?" he abruptly demanded.

Floyd stopped, gazing at the other with parted lips and startled gray eyes. A strong wind was blowing off Lake Erie, tossing his bronze hair and wrapping his long coat about him.

"My sister?" he repeated. "Why?"

"She is a woman, she must have some life of her own. You can't keep her like a nun until she finds herself grown old without a chance at living."

Floyd continued to gaze at him, saying nothing; that half-hour in the office had left him almost wan in the gray afternoon light.

"You know me, Jes Floyd, if any one does. You know my vile temper, my rough tongue, and that I am a cross-grained brute at best. But I think there may be enough of the inherent gentleman left in me to make me decent to a woman. If, in time, things fell out so that I'd asked you for your sister, would you be willing? Speak frankly, if you do not think me fit to be trusted with her, say so—it will not break our friendship."

"You have seen her once," Floyd recalled, as if to himself. He lisped, his surest sign of excitement. Stanton had never heard him use that soft, slurring speech except on the racetracks; heard now in the quiet country surroundings, it infected the listener with a contagious agitation and emotion.

"I know, I know," he deprecated.
"But, I might see her more, and seeing no better men she might come to bear with me. Not that there is much in me worth it—she probably never would look at me. What I am asking you, now, is whether you want me to keep away from her. Say yes, and we will shake hands and drop the subject for ever."

Very slowly Floyd held out his slender hand.

"Jessica has the right to a chance,"
he agreed. "I'm not going to meddle with things beyond my understandin'.
An' I'd rather have her your wife than have anything else in the world. Only —you've seen her just once—you can't tell if you want her, yet."

Stanton shot him one straight, expressive glance.

"She is like you," slipped from him involuntarily; then, furious at his betrayal of sentiment, he dropped the other's hand. "We had better go, or we'll miss the train," he bruski reminded.

"Oh, she is like me," confirmed Floyd; he turned to look again at the factory. "We are pretty close chums.
Yes, you an' I had better be gettin' to the train."

They walked back to the nearest trolley line, both silent.

The subject was not touched again, until the following morning, when they left the train in New York.

"When shall I see you?" Stanton questioned, as they exchanged farewells in the noisy depot. "To-morrow?"

"I'm going to be out of town for the next two weeks, Mr. Green tells me," Floyd replied. "They want me at the Mercury factory, and there are some other trips, too, I believe. Jessica is going to be rather deserted; if you happen to look her up, no doubt she would be glad to speak to some one besides her nurse."

"Thank you," accepted Stanton, as carelessly. "Take care of yourself."
He had not reached the exit when Floyd overtook him.

"Here are the entries for the Cup race," he panted, thrusting a folded newspaper into Stanton's hand. "There are two Atlanta cars to run against us. It's you who need to take care of yourself, until afterward."

"Floyd, wait! What do you mean?
Do you really think—"

But his mechanic evaded the question.

"Some people are hoodoos," he laughed. "Keep away from them, please. Good-by."

He had not spoken Valerie Carlisle's name, yet Stanton knew against whom he warned. And the melodramatic absurdity of the idea did not prevent

They Walked Back to the Car Line, Both Silent.

an odd thrill of discomfort and insecurity, from which he took his usual refuge in roughness.

"I'm not in the habit of hiding from people, hoodoos or not. Good-by."

"Oh, very well," acquiesced Floyd oddly. "But if you won't take care of yourself, Stanton—"
"Well, what?"
"Never mind."

A WORD WITH WOMEN

Valuable Advice For Seymour
Readers.

Many a woman endures with noble patience the daily misery of backache, pains about the hips, blue, nervous spells, dizziness and urinary disorders, hopeless of relief because she doesn't know what is the matter.

It is not true that every pain in the back or hips is trouble "peculiar to the sex." When the kidneys get congested and inflamed, there are many such aches and pains and the whole body suffers.

You can tell it is kidney trouble if the secretions are dark colored, contain sediment; the passages are too frequent or scanty. Then help the weakened kidneys. They can't get well alone.

Doan's Kidney Pills have brought sound backs and new life and strength to thousands of suffering women. They are endorsed by thou-

Ten Feet Deep

By Clarissa Mackie

THE day I went crabbing with Captain Barnabas Fish I carried a basket containing all the dainties that I knew the good captain loved. He had become an enthusiast about club sandwiches, which he had not tasted before this summer when I first made his acquaintance, and so I was careful that there was a goodly supply of these toothsome "entire meal" sandwiches in the lunch basket. There was also a great square of frosted gingerbread, and wrapped in a napkin were several flaky plum tarts. In one corner of the basket was a tall bottle of dandelion wine. All these delicacies were produced by the skillful hands of Miss Maria Weeks, with whom I boarded.

Crabbing is a favorite pastime among the summer visitors at Quince Haven. One enters a sturdy flat bottomed skiff and, leaving the deeper waters of the bay, seeks the narrow channel leading into Little Quince harbor. This channel is navigable only at high tide, and if one is so unfortunate as to remain within the charming circle of Little Quince hills until the tide has ebbed it is only a three mile tramp around the beach to Quince Haven, with another trip back to the crabbing grounds for the skiff when the tide next serves.

Captain Barnabas Fish knew the tide as well as he did the wind and weather and the set of clouds, so we reached the little channel just as the tide flowed deep enough to carry us swiftly through its narrow width into Little Quince harbor. Once in here, Captain Barnabas allowed the skiff to drift quietly along the low shore among the tall, reedy salt grasses.

The crab nets were brought forth, and each of us took a long pole and warily dredged for the succulent crustaceans. Now and then one of us would bring up a pole with the net bag heavily weighted with the black wriggling creatures, or perhaps one lone captive would cling by a single claw to the netting.

As noon approached the pile in Captain Barnabas' big basket grew higher, and at last we gave up the sport and poled the skiff into the cool shadow of wild plum bushes overhanging from the high bank.

From under the bank little rills of ice cold water gushed from hidden springs, and here we washed our hands and returned to the skiff for lunch. Captain Barnabas wanted to broil

"A gigantic figure that gave vent to a snarling yell."

some crabs on a hastily constructed driftwood fire, but I vetoed the suggestion, tempting as it was.

I presented one of his loved club sandwiches, and his gray eyes twinkled appreciatively.

"It's better 'n broiled crabs," he murmured from the midst of a huge bite of crisp toast, lettuce leaf, mayonnaise, chicken breast and tender bacon.

"You never tasted anything quite so delicious even on that treasure island of yours," I declared meaningly.

"Ho, ho!" roared the captain, slapping his knee vigorously. "I knew there was something back of that sandwich, Miss Telham! Now, I was going to tell you that story today anyway, so you might have kept all your bribes to home."

"Then you shall tell it all the better for the sandwiches," I returned, undaunted by his laughter. "I hope it's a story where you were cast ashore without even a bag of biscuits—they sound so dry and unpalatable. I'm sure bread fruit and coconuts are much more delicious."

"They're delicious, all right," agreed the captain amiably, helping himself to another sandwich. "but you get tired of eating fruit even on a desert island, and hardtack ain't to be despised even if it is washed down by stale water, not when you're hungry. Now,

Ananias Silue ain't in this story, so I shall have to stick to the truth and tell you we were not cast ashore, but we rowed to the island right and proper in a ship's dinghy, with a keg of water and a bag of biscuits and some tins of salt horse stowed in the bow. We also took some picks and shovels, and some guns.

"We knew the little island like a book. It was not far from the west coast of Central America and had been dug over from one end to the other by different treasure seekers, all after the same hidden gold and jewels. I can't stop to tell you the history surrounding the burying of the treasure by the oldest old pirate that ever sailed the seas in the days before Captain Kidd. I can't tell you, either, of all the different expeditions that combed that island from end to end without success, and at last we folks aboard the Indus resolved to have a try at it one voyage when we were sailing light from San Francisco to Valparaiso, where we were going to pick up a cargo of nitrate.

"Four of us went ashore in the dinghy, and the minute we stepped on that shell strewn beach and heard the rustling of the palms and smelled the ripe fruit we knew right away that we were going to find that treasure. There was something in the very atmosphere of the place that hinted at adventure, and we had plenty of it before we left. Thank you, ma'am. I will take another piece of gingerbread. I don't reckon you made it?" he inquired.

I assured him that Miss Maria Weeks had concocted the spicy loaf, and I thought he looked tenderly reminiscent at the frosting before he removed a semicircle from his slice. I had a suspicion that in the distant past there might have lurked a tender romance between my companionable old salt and the rather grim spinster who "accommodated" me with room and board. I had my own plans for furthering this romance, and the delicious lunch I had brought was only one of little traps I had prepared for the gentle, unsuspecting captain.

"You went ashore?"—I prompted him.

"Yes, ma'am. We went ashore and made a little camp among the palms, and after we had had some supper we started off at a run for the place where we had calculated the treasure was buried. Of course every man who ever went to that island had a different theory as to where it was hid, but we thought ours was a sure guess, for Louis Franck, a Finn who was one of our crew, had an ancestor who had actually sailed with this bloody old pirate away back before the Revolutionary war days. Franck could recite the legend that had been handed down by his ancestor so glibly that he could tell it the same every time, and so after awhile we got to believe it was really so, and that was how it happened we decided to stop there.

"Of course Franck was the leader and guide, for he said his ancestor had said that the chest was buried ten feet deep under a rock ten feet square.

"We found the largest rock on the island, and it was only three feet six by six feet two, and it looked thin, and Franck said he thought it had been worn off by the wind and weather during all that time. It was snow white coral rock too.

"The rock was set in a little grove of palm trees, and I suppose once it had rested on the sandy shore, but as the island grew larger and sand was washed up to form a new beach trees grew up around the stone until it really was about in the middle of the island when we found it.

"We worked away picking and prying at the loose sand around the rock and trying to get crowsaws under it so as to lift it up when we smelled wood smoke."

"What's that?" asked Franck.

"The remains of our campfire," I told him, but afterward I found out I was wrong.

"It soon grew dark, for we had been late in landing and we had not intended beginning operations until morning, but the thirst for adventure was strong within us and even while the shadows lengthened a full moon arose from the sea and we decided to continue the work by its light.

"We had just pried off the stone and sent it crashing into the undergrowth when there arose from our midst, apparently from the disturbed soil under the stone, a gigantic figure that gave vent to a snarling yell as he leaped into the moonlit space and faced us.

"Miss Telham," said the captain impressively, emphasizing his words with successive taps of a horny forefinger against his other palm, "Miss Telham, believe me, ma'am, when I tell you that that figure was nothing more or less than the ghost of the bloody pirate who had buried the treasure!"

"Captain Barnabas!" I protested.

He nodded. "That's what Louis Franck, the Finn, said. He said the critter looked just like the description his ancestor had handed down of the pirate who had buried the treasure. He whispered to us, for I'll confess, ma'am, we huddled together all at once under the shock of seeing him and hearing his yell. I don't know which was the worst. He was a crazy looking thing, sure enough, as he pranced around there, waving a ragged looking knife and shouting all sorts of gibberish that nobody understood.

"I told Franck it sounded to me like Finnish, but he said it was Italian, and Tony Laconti said it was German, and the mate, who was a Britisher, said it was pure French. From what I heard afterward I guess it was Irish. Well, as I was saying, the pirate was crazy enough in looks—he wore knee breeches and a loose white shirt and a red sash around his waist with all kinds of weapons stuck in it, and his hair was long and dark, and over his forehead was bound a red handkerchief knotted behind. We could see all this because the tropical moon made it like day there on the white beach.

"How do you know it's a ghost?" I whispered to Louis Franck, who shivered beside me.

"He said the critter came from under the stone, and I couldn't deny it because it looked that way to me, and now as he capered around out there a sudden terror seized upon the whole four of us at once, and as we turned and ran he dashed into the thicket after us and away we went pell mell for the shore where we had left the boat.

"As we ran I could feel my hair bristling on my head, and cold shivers ran down my spine. All I wanted was to reach the boat and push off for the ship. We were all young chaps and had our share of sailors' superstitions. If an older head had been along things might have turned out different.

"We piled into the boat and pushed off, leaving all our stores behind. As we pulled toward the Indus—I was second mate on her then—we turned around and saw the ghostly pirate dancing at the water's edge. The knife flashed in the moonlight, and then all at once he disappeared, and there remained nothing save a ball of weird blue light that floated through the air in our wake.

"Where would you be, captain, if you had all that money?"

"Captain Sackville declared it was a corpse light, and as our boat was hoisted to the davits he had all sails bent, anchors up, and away we went clipping along before a fresh nor'wester and at last, to our relief, leaving the blue light behind with the island far astern."

The captain replaced the luncheon basket in the stern of the skiff, shifted the oars into the rowlocks and deftly shot out into Little Quince harbor. The blades of the oars rifled the placid surface in which the tall grasses were mirrored, and from a tall pine tree a red winged blackbird called.

"Well!" I asked impatiently, "Didn't you go back after the treasure?"

The captain shook his head solemnly, although I am positive his eyes twinkled amusement. He leaned forward, and the skiff shot into the channel that led into Quince Haven harbor.

"Miss Telham, when we arrived in New York months afterward we read in the papers that at last Little island had given up her treasure to a bold Irishman from Hackensack, N. J. It told how this man, Sweeney, had pried up a flat stone and, together with his companions, had dug ten feet deep, mind you, Miss Telham, and found a chest of gold and jewels. If this Sweeney had not found us there and scared us away with his pretence of being a ghost of the pirate and afterward burning a blue signal light—why, I wouldn't be rowing you home across the bay this afternoon!"

"Where would you be, captain," I asked curiously, "if you had all that money?"

Captain Barnabas cocked an eye at the fleecy clouds, twisted his sunburned neck uncomfortably and finally spat reflectively over the side. At last he looked at me and grinned sheepishly.

"I reckon I'd be enjoying myself going crabbing with somebody or other," he said.

Glad They Told Him.

What it is to be a genuine, single minded egotist is illustrated by an occurrence related by an American who spends much of his time in England. Among his acquaintances is a certain distinguished Britisher who is a great invalid and spends most of his time in bed, a fact which, however, does not prevent him from receiving a great deal of company. One day while thus in bed the Britisher received several guests. They all began to shiver and pull their coats about them as they huddled around the bed.

"What!" exclaimed the invalid. "Is it cold here?"

"We are freezing," answered a guest. "Thank you for telling me," said the distinguished invalid, who thereupon rang a bell. The guests supposed that he was summoning a servant to build a fire, but when his man came in the invalid said:

"Mullins, bring me my down coverlet."—Harper's Magazine.

ORIGINAL TABLE FOR DEN

Desk-Closet-Bookcase-Table Designed by an Interior Decorator for His Own Use.

An interior decorator has had executed for his own use in a little, built-in den a unique desk-closet-bookcase-table. He bought one of those table-desks with a drawer in the middle and a narrow shelf at each end. The shelves are about fifteen inches from the floor, are supported, back and front, by little slats and are open at the ends of the table. He had his workmen make a little closet out of each of these shelves by placing a board behind the slats at each end, another between the drawer and the shelf to form the closet back, and a door with a lock and key across each end of the table. There was still unutilized space below the drawer and between the closets. This, at first seemed, he would need for knee room when using the table as a desk. But at last he hit upon the plan of building into that space two shelves which, by touching a button, could be made to slide back far enough to permit him to draw close to his desk. These shelves were filled with books, so that when flush with the table edge, the gay bindings were in full view. The closets may be used for writing materials, liquors, cigars, pipes, magazines—any of the little things that usually litter a den. A cabinet maker or interior decorator would so transform a table for no great sum.—Vogue.

CENTRAL IS SURE TO KNOW

Telephone Operator Infallible Authority on Pronunciation of Difficult Proper Names.

Three men argued over the pronunciation of a fourth man's name. The fourth man was not present. He was prominent, but unknown to the disputants.

"We'll settle this thing right now," said one.

He called a telephone operator on the fourth man's exchange.

"Say, Central, how do you pronounce this name?" he asked.

He spelled it out. She told him. Her pronunciation differed from anything previously suggested.

"But it is all right, am sure," said the man who had telephoned. "Those girls always know. They are an authority on the pronunciation of proper names. A man with a funny name can't bear to hear it called wrong, even over the phone, and the first thing he does when he acquires the use of a new telephone is to drill the operator on the correct pronunciation."

Sleep.

The doctor folk would change the instruction "early to bed and early to rise" to "early to bed and late to rise." They have been studying sleep from the physiological, the chemical and biological points of view, and they find that of the many sacrifices made to the pursuit of happiness the most unhappy results come from the sacrifice of sleep.

The Medical Record says: "We are apt to call Towser and Tabby lazy animals, but no physiologist doubts that they live more hygienically in respect to sleep than do their human masters or mistresses. It is declared that in the cities 'well-to-do' multitudes live and die without experience of the pure delight of unadulterated muscle fatigue and of the sudden and deep sleep that normally follows a day of purely muscular work."

The campaign for gymnasiums, the preaching about exercise and athletics, the annual summer vacation rush, the vast literature about the simple life, even the back-to-the-soil movement, may all have their true source in that silent crying of the human body for normal living—a feeling of perfect fitness associated with intense wakefulness, muscular weariness in company with the desire for sleep.—Toledo Blade.

His Peculiar Way.

A well-known artist, whose pictures are characterized by extreme delicacy and beauty both of subject and treatment, recounted a somewhat florid story to his model one day. Shortly after the model happening to pose for a painter whose pictures are noted for being quite the reverse of delicate, told the tale to him. "Rather vulgar," was his comment. Next time the model saw the first artist she said:

"Do you remember the story you told me the other day? Mr. — says it is vulgar."

"Oh, well," was the indifferent reply, "every man has a streak of vulgarity in his composition. In one it may come out in the stories he tells, while another gives expression to it in his pictures."

Ear Phones for a Church.

Ear phones have been introduced into the Wollaston Congregational Church of Quincy, Mass. This is the first church in the city to adopt this invention.

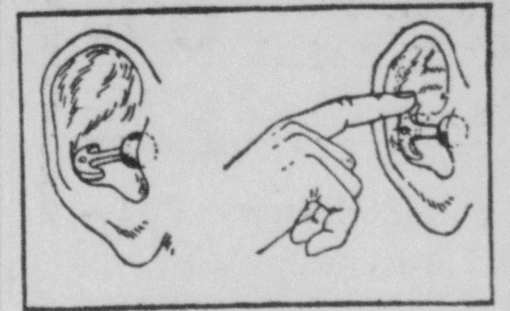

A transmitter and six receivers comprise the initial equipment and should these prove satisfactory others will be added as occasion requires.

The apparatus is extremely simple, consisting of a neat box-like transmitter at the pulpit and modest watch-like receivers, on convenient handles, in various pews. Receivers and transmitters are connected by invisible wiring and the electricity is supplied by dry cells.

PROTECTS EARS OF SAILORS

Ingenuous Contrivance Without Which Men Would Soon Lose Their Sense of Hearing.

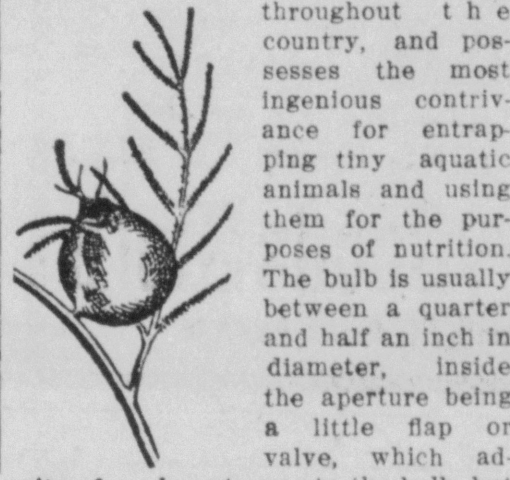

Many people have wondered how the men on the deck of a battleship can stand the awful shock produced by the discharge of heavy artillery. The gunners within the turrets are not affected much because the gun discharges outside. To save the eardrums from destruction ear-protectors are employed, such as shown in the accompanying picture, taken from the Scientific American. The protector consists of a celluloid piece shaped somewhat like an anchor, with a ball at one end, which fits in the ear.

FLESH-FEEDING PLANT.

This curious looking plant is found in many deep pools and water ditches throughout the country, and possesses the most ingenious contrivance for entrapping tiny aquatic animals and using them for the purposes of nutrition. The bulb is usually between a quarter and half an inch in diameter, inside the aperture being a little flap or valve, which admits of ready entrance to the bulb, but effectually prevents egress. Insects entering the bulb find themselves trapped, and are eventually killed in their confined water prison. After this they gradually putrefy and are absorbed by this flesh-eating plant.

HYPNOTIZING A FOWL.

That a fowl can be hypnotized can be proved in the following way. A cock chicken—hens are, by some strange reason, impervious to the operation—is placed upon a dark board or table. Its neck is gently stretched until the shoulder and neck are lying along the board with the point of the beak touching the table. From the beak a white line, perfectly straight, is drawn with a piece of chalk, right in front of the bird, so that it sees the line with both eyes. The result of this will be that the bird will remain staring, with its beak on the line until it is removed.

GROWING BOTTLES

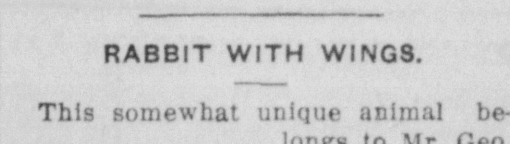

This tree, which grows largely in Australia, is called the bottle tree, on account of its curious formation.

It sometimes grows to the height of 50 feet, and seems to represent bottles of all shapes, both right side up and upside down. The natives sometimes hollow out the trunks of these trees, which contain a glutinous substance that gives a refreshing drink, and make excellent canoes from them.

"PAUL PRY" CONTRIVANCE.

Outside the window seems a peculiar place to keep a mirror, but many people have one attached to their windows, and can thus, by just glancing through the window, see a long distance up the street. It is also useful for noting callers, and a great convenience in the matter of excluding undesirable visitors.

RABBIT WITH WINGS.

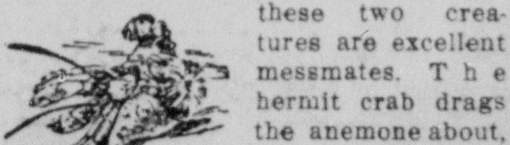

This somewhat unique animal belongs to Mr. Geo. Levett of Eastbourne, England.

The rabbit is living and is twelve months old. It has seven legs, although the extra ones are of no use whatever. The wings can be moved by the rabbit, but, of course, it cannot fly. The wings measure from tip to tip 26 inches in length.

BOON COMPANIONS.

On the shell of the hermit crab is often found a small sea-anemone, and these two creatures are excellent messmates. The hermit crab drags the anemone about, and so enables it to find fresh food, while the anemone, when the crab is at rest, spreads its tentacles out, and so effectually screens the crab from observation that he can take a siesta undisturbed.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

Genuine Merit Required to Win the People's Confidence.

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been cured, to those who are in need of it.

In an interview on the subject a prominent local druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend for in almost every case it shows immediate results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy that I know of has so large a sale."

The success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder diseases, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

A free trial bottle will be sent by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper. Regular size bottle sold at all druggists—50c and $1.00.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS

A Few Applications of a Simple Remedy Will Bring Back the Natural Color.

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place" is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature needs assistance. It is Nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good reliable hair-restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandfathers used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and recommended and sold by all druggists.

For Women Who Care

Of course you use an antiseptic in your family and in the care of your own person, and you want the best.

Instead of what you have been using such as liquid or tablet antiseptics or peroxide, won't you please try Paxtine, a concentrated antiseptic powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

Paxtine is more economical, more cleansing, more germicidal and more healing than anything you ever used.

Paxtine
ANTISEPTIC

In the toilet—to cleanse and whiten the teeth, remove tartar and prevent decay. To disinfect the mouth, destroy disease germs, and purify the breath. To keep artificial teeth and bridgework clean and odorless. To remove nicotine from the teeth and purify the breath after smoking. To eradicate perspiration odors by sponge bathing.

As a medicinal agent for local treatment of feminine ills where pelvic catarrh, inflammation and ulceration exist, nothing equals hot douches of Paxtine. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. has been regularly advising their patients to use it because of its extraordinary cleansing, healing and germicidal power. For this purpose alone Paxtine is worth its weight in gold. Also for nasal catarrh, sore throat, inflamed eyes, cuts and wounds. All druggists, 25 and 50 cents a box. Trial box and testimony of 32 women free on request. THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE.

Large Barn and Contents of Geo. A. Dodds' Totally Destroyed.

A large barn located on the Wilcox farm in Washington county and owned by Geo. A. Dodds of Ft. Ritner, a wealthy farmer and stockman, was destroyed by fire Tuesday night. In the barn were nine head of horses and mules, 750 bushels of corn, and a new buggy, a quantity of grain and feed and other property, all of which were destroyed. Mr. Dodds carried insurance on the barn, on two head of horses and on part of the grain but the other property belonged to his tenant, E. E. Rosenbaum, and was not insured. The total loss on the barn and property will amount to $1500.

The fire occurred about 10:30 o'clock but the tenant, Mr. Rosenbaum, was not aware of it until this morning. When he went out to feed the stock, he found the barn in ashes and all of his property destroyed.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

A Home Coming of former Columbus high school graduates will be held at that place tonight. Several from this city will attend.

Bryan Hays, son of Prosecuting Attorney Noble Hays, has accepted a position as reporter for the Democrat during the vacation months.

About forty members of the Medora Temple of Pythian Sisters attended the district meeting held at Orleans Tuesday. The Medora team put on the degree work.

The Seymour Imperials will play the Glenwoods at New Albany tomorrow. The team will go down in the morning and will be accompanied by a number of local "fans."

W. H. Knight left this morning for Cambridge to attend the reunion of his regiment, the 19th Ind. Mr. Knight is 78 years old and has looked forward to this trip for some time.

The remains of the late L. N. Weddle arrived here this morning from Indianapolis, and were taken directly to Riverview cemetery. A short funeral service was held at the grave by Eld. G. M. Shotts. Accompanying the body were Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Ford, and Mrs. Ella Mullen of Louisville, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weddle, Mrs. Rena Meyers and Mrs. Mayme Hunter of Indianapolis, and Mrs. William Shepard and daughter, Mrs. O. Childers, of Mitchell.

Mrs. Alonzo Vest who is addicted to the morphine habit is not having a very pleasant stay at the county jail where she was sent for conducting a house of ill repute, as she is having considerable difficulty in securing the "dope" there. Mrs. Vest is accustomed to using a large quantity of morphine each day and is finding it rather hard to break away from the old habit at the county jail. She has several days yet to serve but declares that she will be unable to remain much longer unless she is given the privilege of using her regular amount of morphine each day.

T. J. Brooks, an attorney of Bedford, is in the city today and appeared at the hearing of the R. R. Commission in the interest of the citizens of Ft. Ritner. Mr. Brooks is one of the proprietors of the Bedford Mail, one of the leading daily newspapers of southern Indiana. The Mail is planning some expensive improvements in their office, and its new building is now nearing completion. A new modern press and a linotype will be installed, and the appearance of the paper will be greatly changed. For a number of years the Mail has been a eight column paper with a "patent inside" but about July 1st it will be all home print. The Mail is a live newspaper and covers the field thoroughly in Lawrence county.

SENSATIONAL TRIAL

Young Woman Named in Ruddick Divorce Suit Gives Testimony.

The Ruddick divorce case which is on trial at Greensburg is attracting considerable attention because of the character of evidence which is being brought out by the testimony of the witnesses. Yesterday a large number of character witnesses were examined but special attraction was centered upon the testimony of Miss Sarah A. Bryan of Columbus, who is named by Mrs. Ruddick in her cross-complaint as a correspondent in the case. She stated that she never met Baker S. Ruddick, the plaintiff at Indianapolis as was alleged, but had made one trip to Indianapolis and one returning with him. She stated, however, that she met him by chance and their meeting was not by appointment.

Miss Bryan said that Mrs. Ruddick had stopped her on the streets of Columbus several times and had called her vile names and accused her of unbecoming conduct.

Attorneys for Mrs. Ruddick tried to bring out by testimony that Mr. Ruddick had called Miss Bryan over the 'phone at night quite frequently, had called on her personally and had taken her buggy riding during the day and also at night.

The plaintiff put witnesses on the stand to testify to the conduct of Mrs. Ruddick while attending the Methodist Sunday School at Columbus on one occasion when she sat with the men's Bible class.

The plaintiff asked for a divorce from Mrs. Ruddick and she filed a cross complaint seeking a decree and alimony in the sum of $25,000.

The trial is progressing slowly, and it will probably be the last of the week before it is completed.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

Entertained.

Mrs. L. B. Hill very delightfully entertained her Sunday School class of the First Baptist church, at her home on West Second street, Tuesday night, in honor of one of the members, Miss Alice Stanfield, who leaves in about ten days for Bloomington, where she will enter Indiana University. The evening was very pleasantly spent in games and contests. During the evening an elegant two course luncheon was served.

Approaching Marriage.

Christopher Nolting of Indianapolis and Miss Minnie Horstman of Brownstown will be united in marriage Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in their new home at Cumberland near Indianapolis.

The wedding will be quiet. Miss Horstman is well known in Seymour and has frequently visited here.

New Programs.

The Indiana Study Club has issued the new programs for the coming year. This club was organized in 1910 and has a membership of twenty active members and five honorary members. Each member is on the program for a paper, a book review and for current events during the year.

Devoir Society.

Miss Blanche Paswater was hostess to the Devoir Society Tuesday evening at her home on Laurel street. During the evening a flash light picture was taken of the members. Refreshments consisting of brick cream and angel food cake were served.

Prof. E. E. Thomas, of Texas, is at the Nickelodeon, and will deliver his popular lecture, "The Gateway of the Panama Canal," illustrated with two reels of motion pictures. Mr. Thomas is touring the United States and will deliver lectures in five cities in each state, having closed up a two weeks' engagement at Kansas City a few days ago, and finishing the state of Missouri with St. Louis.

Now, this is not to be confused with the moving picture of the Panama Canal itself, as it is a production of Bolivar, the Gateway of this country for the Canal.

There are some facts connected with Port Bolivar that every one should know, and there are to be established throughout this country free bureaus of information for the enlightenment of the public regarding this great understanding.

Seymour Temperatures.

The following are the maximum and minimum temperatures as shown by the government thermometers at the Seymour volunteer weather observation station and reported by J. Robt. Blair, observer. The figures are for twenty-four hours ending at noon:
